Montreal gunman carried suicide note

Associated Press
MONTREAL — The gunman who ranged through the University of Montreal's engineering school and killed 14 women carried a suicide letter explaining that women had spoiled his life and he was seeking revenge, police said Thursday.
In his rampage Wednesday afternoon, the young man — identified only as "Marc" — also wounded 11 women and four men before killing himself.
As he roamed through the modern, six-story engineering building, firing a rifle, he shouted at one point, "You're all a bunch of feminists!"
None of the wounded remained in critical but stable condition Thursday. The rest were out of danger.

Lithuanian parliament formally ends communist party rule

Associated Press
MOSCOW — The Communist Party suffered a major defeat in the Lithuanian parliament on Thursday when the parliament abolished the constitutional guarantee of Communist supremacy and legalized a multi-party system.
A similar action has been taken in Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and East Germany as part of the wave of political upheaval and reform that is abolishing the role of the Communist Party in those nations.
Lithuania's parliament defied Moscow with a resounding 243-1 vote and ended the party's total dominance of political and social organizations in the Baltic republic. Another 98 deputies abstained or stayed away from the session.
President Mikhail S. Gorbachev has not yet resolvedly opposed a multi-party system for the Soviet Union. The challenge to the Communist power structure comes at a time when he is facing a crippled economy, growing nationalism and demands from conservative communists for more order.
The move in Lithuania, one of 15 Soviet republics, thrilled other Soviet nationalists who are organizing a two-day general strike Monday to call for similar action by the national parliaments.
"Wonderfully done!" said activist Yelena Bonner on hearing of the Lithuanian action. "You cannot remain silent in the movement today. This is a brave example for the other republics," said Bonner, wife of Nobel Peace Prize winner Andrei Sakharov, and a group of national parliamentarians calling for the general strike.
Lithuania's parliament voted Wednesday to delay voting on a similar switch to a multiparty system until next week, to allow time for public discussion. Armenia's parliament was forced into a postponement Wednesday for lack of a quorum.

Policeman found guilty in slaying

Associated Press
MIAMI — A Hispanic policeman was found guilty of manslaughter Thursday in the deaths of two black men, and black leaders praised the verdict as a just response to the shooting that set off three days of racial violence.
Miami Officer William Lozano, 31, showed no emotion when he heard the verdict in the Jan. 16 deaths of motorcyclist Clement Lloyd, 23, and passenger Allan Blanchard, 24. The two counts carry a total maximum sentence of 45 years.
Circuit Judge Joseph Farina deferred adjudication on the jury's findings, an administrative formality to allow a pre-sentencing investigation. He ordered everyone involved to return to court Jan. 24. Lozano remained free on $10,000 bond and had to surrender his passport.
The televised verdict by the six-member, multi-ethnic jury brought relief to an inner-city black community that feared the trial would spark another round of racial unrest.
"It just shows that our system works if people will give it a chance to work and that there are other ways of impacting the system than through violence," said Willie Sims, a black community leader who is a member of Dade County's community relations board.

He said that by mid-afternoon there had been no reports of violence. Community leaders praised the presence of two black jurors and the almost gavel-to-gavel live broadcast coverage of the trial as reassuring the community the trial would be fair.
"We were relieved that justice has been served," said George Lubrin, Blanchard's brother-in-law.
"We are very satisfied that the verdict came back guilty on both counts, and that the trial itself was very fair," said Barry Greff, attorney for the Lloyd family.
Some police were dismayed, feeling Lozano was defending himself in the shooting.
"Most of my members are in shock. We all felt William Lozano was justified," said Richard Kinne, head of the Fraternal Order of Police, which represents most of the city's officers.
Asked what the average officer thinks, Kinne replied: "He's seriously thinking what he's going to do in a life-threatening situation. They could become concerned and hesitant out in the street."

The jury had deliberated six hours Wednesday and reconvened Thursday, deliberating for an additional 1 1/2 hours.
Defense attorneys and Lozano's family did not offer comment, but left the courtroom quickly, his wife in tears.
Lozano, who remains suspended with full pay, talked about his case later at his attorney's office.
"I was not given a fair trial from the beginning. There was a lot of evidence denied and quashed," he said. "We're going to look for a new appeal based on the circumstances." He would not elaborate.
Defense attorney Roy Black said: "From the beginning, every major ruling was against us. To even refuse us the right to present witnesses is bizarre. It was critical for the jury to know the motivation of Clement Lloyd and why he didn't want to stop and why he tried to run over this officer. The jury got a false impression of this case."

Pres. Lee addresses local businessmen

By MATT MEAGHER
Universe Staff Writer

The relationship between BYU and the community is not only profitable to both, but also essential, said BYU President Rex Lee in a speech given Thursday to area businessmen.
President Lee gave credit to the community and especially Abraham Smoot, who "largely out of his own funds kept the Brigham Young Academy operating" in the 1890s. He also gave credit to Jesse Knight for being the counterpart to Abraham Smoot in later years.
"It will never again be, I think, necessary for us to turn to the local community for survival, but it will be necessary for us to continue" to solicit funds from others to continue growing and improving in areas like the library and drawing world-class faculty, he said.
"BYU will always be principally financed by the LDS Church. What makes BYU unique is the values and standards of the LDS Church," President Lee said.
President Lee said from time to time there will be changes in some minor details in the Honor Code because times change, but he could not ever see the time where BYU didn't impose some kind of dress and grooming standard.

He said he was personally in favor of the Honor Code.
BYU is a "very changed organization from the days when I was there," President Lee said.
He compared the numbers at BYU now to when he was a student at BYU.
He said in the early 1950s BYU had about 12 academic buildings; today there are about 425. There were approximately 220 faculty with about a quarter having doctorates then. Now there are about 1350 with 78 percent having doctorates.
President Lee said BYU used to serve 800 meals a day compared to 33,000 meals today.
When he was a student at BYU, there were 15 miles of telephone cable, and today there are 5500 miles of cable.
"In the 1880s the total faculty budget was $4,200. Today (that budget) would pay about 20 hours of our electricity bill," President Lee said.

Eating disorder program helps BYU students, others

By LARA MAYO
Universe Staff Writer

About half the people that participate in Orem Community Hospital's eating disorder program are BYU students, according to a hospital spokesperson.
The people suffer from anorexia nervosa, bulimia or compulsive eating.
Debbie Christensen, director of the Center for Counseling, Education and Research at OCH, said men and women with these problems "are running away from their emotions and pain."
An OCH press release said these people often suffer from depression, anxiety, guilt, isolation, irritability or passivity and have an obsession with food.
To solve their problems these people turn to food.
"We want to help them deal with reality so they don't have to escape (to food)," Christensen said.

In the release Christensen said, "Compulsive eating has nothing to do with hunger, just like alcoholism has nothing to do with alcohol. Compulsive eating has to do with the way the person feels inside and that person's inability to deal with those feelings."
In the release Harold A. Frost, clinical director of the Eating Disorder Program at Utah Valley Regional Medical Center, said, "Many people eat compulsively when stress comes into their lives. What they do is turn to bingeing on food in an attempt to calm themselves."
"When I ask what eating compulsively does for my patients, they frequently tell me that it makes them feel numb," he said.
"It becomes a diversion — as you polish off a pizza, you aren't focusing on a dysfunctional marriage or a painful past."

Pro-choicers say abortion is a right

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of a two-part story examining the issue of abortion in Utah.

By DOUG GIBSON
Senior Reporter

According to Utah leaders of the pro-choice movement, the issue isn't whether abortion is right or wrong, the issue is whether a woman can do with her body what she wants.
"If the Supreme Court were to overturn Roe vs. Wade (the landmark 1973 decision that guaranteed a woman the right to a legal abortion her first three months of pregnancy) well, it would turn back the clock to the bad old days," said Michelle Parish-Pixler, Utah's head of the American Civil Liberties Union.
In Utah, more than 3,500 abortions are performed annually at clinics in Salt Lake City and Ogden.
A recent KSL-Channel 5 poll determined that 40 percent of Utah residents favor a woman's choice of whether or not to abort her unborn fetus.
The poll also indicated that 54 percent favor the possibility of aborting a deformed fetus, 85 percent if the mother's life is in danger, 90 percent if the unwanted pregnancy comes as a result of rape or incest and 97 percent if the mother's life is threatened during the delivery.

Also, the poll indicated that 30 percent of Utahns support the idea that abortion is a right guaranteed by the United States Constitution.
"The major public opinion polls in this state show that most Utahns trust the ability of a woman to make the personal decision regarding abortion and what is best for her," said Suzanne Millsaps, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League in Utah.
Both NARAL and the ACLU are joining with Planned Parenthood, The National Organization of Women and other pro-choice organizations in an effort nationwide to unveil what they describe as an "overwhelming majority" of Americans who favor a woman's reproductive rights.
Since the July Supreme Court decision that cut into Roe vs. Wade by denying access to public abortions and requiring counseling, etc., scores of pro-choice rallies have been organized all across the country. Recently Salt Lake City held a rally that coincided with a national rally in Washington D.C. Also, pro-choice heavyweights, such as NOW leader Molly Yard have appeared locally to assist Parish-Pixler and Millsaps in getting their pro-choice message across. Both women sense a pro-choice swing in Utah. Both also fear that a Supreme Court dominated by Ronald Reagan appointees will reverse the tide without consulting the public. "The current justices have returned us to the days when a woman had to risk her life to terminate a pregnancy," said Millsaps.

"If you take away this right to an abortion ... it's going to be a war, and it'll be worse than Vietnam," insists Parish-Pixler. "It is our bodies, and this is a right that women will not give up without a struggle."
At the Utah Women's Health Center in Salt Lake City abortions are performed daily. A spokesperson who wishes to remain anonymous said that the center enforces Utah law which requires that a minor be with a parent or have a notarized letter stating that a parent is aware of the abortion.
"If girls don't feel comfortable notifying their parents, we recommend that (they) go to Colorado for their abortions," said the spokesperson. "Colorado has no notification law. We have a referral clinic in Grand Junction." The SLC center goes over medical records with the girl or woman and does lab work to decide the health effects of the abortion.

Filipino rebels hold out against Aquino

MANILA, Philippines — Talks with rebel holdouts on Cebu Island broke down Thursday after mutineers in Manila laid down their arms, and a political rival predicted more attempts to overthrow President Corazon Aquino.

Cardinal Jaime L. Sin, Roman Catholic archbishop of Manila, endorsed an appeal by Mrs. Aquino for people to join a mass rally Friday in support of democracy.

"The future of the nation is in your hands," the cardinal said to Filipinos.

Mrs. Aquino's support has eroded because of rising prices, other economic problems and charges of incompetence and corruption.

When rebels marched back to their Manila barracks Thursday from the Makati financial district, after a week-long mutiny, they chanted: "No surrender! The fight goes on!"

At least 79 people were killed and more than 570 wounded in the mutiny, which began last Friday in Manila and on Cebu, 350 miles south of Manila.

In Cebu City, about 400 rebels at Mactan Air Base refused to give up.

Gen. Renato de Villa, the military chief of staff, pleaded with the leader of the Mactan rebels, Brig. Gen. Jose Commendador, not to carry out threats to blow up the 16 military aircraft at the base.

Commendador refused offers by local politicians to guarantee him and his troops safe passage from the base, and said his men would hold out until Mrs. Aquino called new elections and resigned.

E. German Communists will cooperate

EAST BERLIN — The Communist Party agreed Thursday to cooperate with the opposition, after 40 years of ruling East Germany with Stalinist orthodoxy, and both sides proposed elections in May and agreed to rewrite the constitution.

The Communist Party may even follow the Hungarian party in changing its name. The first talks between party and opposition delegations were held after publication of the new Communist program and produced an agreement to recommend that Parliament schedule elections May 6.

They also agreed on the need for a new constitution, but no details were released.

About 2,500 people marched to the site of the talks in a Lutheran Church building and chanted, "Free elections! Free elections!"

Lt. Gen. Wolfgang Schwanz, chief of state security, said angry citizens had stormed secret police facilities in four cities, inflicting "numerous slight injuries to our colleagues."

Premier quits; Czechs seek compromise

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — Premier Ladislav Adamec resigned Thursday while still bargaining with a powerful opposition that demanded the Communists form an acceptable government or suffer another general strike.

Adamec, 63, announced his resignation at a meeting with non-Communist party officials about changes in the government, said Bohuslav Kucera of the Socialist Party. He quoted Adamec as saying a new, younger leader was needed to achieve a compromise.

President Gustav Husak asked Deputy Premier Marian Calfa, 43, to take over and continue searching for a solution, the official CTK news agency reported.

Calfa, a Communist, has attended most of Adamec's recent meetings with opposition leaders, who rejected the Cabinet Adamec formed Dec. 3.

Adamec had been expected to name a new government Friday that would involve some form of power sharing with the opposition, which in a few weeks has become strong enough to break the Communist Party's 41-year monopoly on power.

Nintendo playing monopoly, Rep. says

WASHINGTON — The chairman of a House antitrust panel charged Thursday there is "strong evidence" that unfair marketing practices by Nintendo of America Inc. have monopolized the home video game industry and kept the prices of Super Mario and his buddies artificially high.

Rep. Dennis Eckart, D-Ohio, asked the Justice Department's antitrust division to investigate Nintendo, the U.S. subsidiary of a Japanese manufacturer that revived the domestic electronic game industry and now controls 80 percent of the $3.4 billion market.

Nintendo officials angrily disputed the charges and accused Eckart of denying them an opportunity to defend themselves.

"This guy is just grandstanding," said Howard C. Lincoln, senior vice president of Nintendo.

Eckart, chairman of the House Small Business subcommittee on antitrust, accused Nintendo of intimidating retailers to keep competitors' games off the toy store shelves.

AIDS vaccine developed for monkeys

WASHINGTON — A new vaccine against a virus that causes AIDS in monkeys is a significant advance toward developing a vaccine to protect people against the closely related human AIDS virus, experts said Thursday.

"The major significance of this work is that (it shows) a vaccine is possible for an AIDS virus," said Michael Murphey-Corb, head of a team at the Delta Regional Primate Research Center in Covington, La., that developed the simian vaccine.

Researchers at the Tulane University research center said a vaccine made of whole, inactivated simian immunodeficiency virus (SIV) can protect rhesus monkeys against the virus, which is a close, genetic relative of the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) that causes AIDS.

Dr. Wayne Koff, chief of AIDS vaccine research at the National Institutes of Health, said the work by Murphey-Corb and her colleagues "is the most significant advance in the vaccine field since we started the AIDS vaccine program. It is a giant leap."

Lindon residents voice redevelopment concerns

By PATRICE D. HEER
Universe Staff Writer

Lindon residents asked questions and voiced concerns about the proposed zone change for the city's third redevelopment project Wednesday evening at the first of two public hearings.

The City Council wants to change the city's master plan to allow for commercial and industrial uses in the proposed redevelopment area. The proposed area consists of 100 acres located between 200 South and 600 South, and 400 West and 800 West.

Many citizens were in favor of the change, but were concerned about the project creating traffic problems.

"Maybe we should try 50 acres first and see how that goes," one citizen said.

Another citizen said he is concerned about where the funds for the project would come from.

Others voiced concerns about being forced from their homes on the basis of eminent domain (the right of the government to condemn private property for public use), while other citizens said they oppose the redevelopment project and want the area left as it is.

presently drafted," Olsen said in a prepared statement he said was being given to all members of the Legislature. "In stating its position, the Church observes and maintains the legitimate and traditional role of all churches to voice their positions on issues of social and moral concern," he said. Utah lawmakers long have been sensitive to the church's position on a variety of issues. Utah's population is about 70 percent Mormon, and more than 90 percent of its lawmakers are church members.

The proposed legislation was drafted by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Task Force. It would require licensed private clubs and restaurants that now sell mixed drinks using 1.7-ounce minibottles to install metering devices that will dispense one ounce of liquor. The bill would ban "brown-bagging" — in which a customer brings liquor into an establishment and buys setups — with the exception of cork-finished wines that could be brought to restaurants, private clubs and on limousines and tour buses that pick up and deliver travelers at their home or hotel.

BYU recycles for money

CECILEE PRICE
Universe Staff Writer

BYU will implement a recycling program to help curb the flow of waste in the community because the school does not have limitless supplies of natural resources, said the BYU Public Communications director.

Paul Richards said, "We're concerned about environmental pollution and ecology. The more we can recycle, the less we have to take off the face of the earth."

The recycling program, which has been in the planning stages for over a year, will be implemented on a campus-wide basis next January with collection bins for paper and metal products placed at key distribution points on campus, Richards said.

"We will have bins at the key points of trash on campus, such as the copy center, the press, the chemical lab and the cafeterias," he said.

The cost of waste distribution is increasing due to expensive landfill programs, making it more economical to recycle, Richards said.

There will be in the tens of thousands of dollars on what we can save through recycling," he said.

The canisters will serve as collection of newspaper products, cardboard, aluminum and other metals.

The materials collected will be baled and shipped to Oregon where they will be recycled.

The program has the potential of generating revenue from otherwise useless materials. The revenue will be used to cover the cost of the program and pay for dumping costs for materials that still must be taken to landfill sites," said the Grounds Maintenance manager, Roy Peterman.

Individuals in offices will not be expected to sort out their waste products.

shufflers out of the faculty, staff and students, although everyone is welcome to contribute to the success of the program, he said.

Eventually, BYU would like to expand the recycling program to each individual office by providing separate waste containers for different kinds of waste products, such as paper and aluminum, Richards said.

BYU's decision to begin recycling is a positive step in the right direction, said a Provo City Landfill attendant, Shawn Hurst.

"This landfill is just about full. In fact we've passed our limit," Hurst said.

Hurst said students can help curb the waste flow by being more conscious of what they throw away and how they dispose of it.

Hurst hopes that other organizations and business in Provo will look at BYU and follow suit with the adoption of recycling projects.

"It is an accepted fact that every city will have to seriously consider recycling in the future," Hurst said.

Students can help in the recycling effort by taking more individual responsibility for the ecology of the community in which they live, said a recycling expert for the Eco-Response Club, Bill Baranowski.

"A lot of environmentalists believe that people should think globally and act locally," Baranowski said.

"If people start with themselves, they will eventually help the big picture," Baranowski said.

Eco-Response has been working with Peterman during the last year on the recycling project. "BYU is afraid that students won't participate, and that is why we are involved with student education programs," he said.

Eco-Response is dedicated to educating interested people about ecological issues so they can live a responsible life, he said.

Students who wish to recycle can take their aluminum cans and aluminum products to Reynold's Aluminum Trailer at 100 N. 600 West in Provo, between 9:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Health Center drugs stolen Wednesday

By JAMES D. CRAWLEY
Universe Staff Writer

Narcotics were reported stolen from the McDonald Health Center Wednesday night.

Brand name narcotics such as Demerol, Vicodin, Percodan and Tylox were missing from a storage drawer. The stolen narcotics are derivatives of morphine.

The prescription value of the stolen drugs was not known at press time, but according to a local pharmacist, the street value of the tablets could be as high as $5 each.

In an unrelated incident, the chemistry lab of the Eyring Science Center was burglarized.

Access to the lab was gained by forcing one of the doors open. No vandalism was reported.

Earlier Wednesday night, an unidentified person or persons spread nitrogen triiodide (NI3) on the east and west sidewalks of the Cannon Center at Helaman Halls.

Walking on the chemical after it has dried can cause a large or small explosion, depending on the amount of the chemical.

The chemical is in a stable condition in a moist or wet state, but if it dries, it becomes extremely explosive.

The chemical has no known use as an explosive because it is far too sensitive to store in a dry state.

No injuries were reported.

Geologist says, look for earthquake faults when house hunting

By ANGELEE J. HARRIS
Universe Staff Writer

People should check for earthquake faults when they buy or build a house, said a Utah County geologist to BYU students and the public Thursday night.

Robert M. Robison, a geologist for the Utah County Planning Office, said houses built a good distance away from a fault will survive an earthquake better than houses straddling a fault or houses in the valley.

The Planning Department will provide people with information concerning faults, Robison said. He also recommended hiring a technical consultant.

During an earthquake in the Utah Valley the "valley would drop and the mountains would rise," Robison said. The drop would cause waves which would grow larger as they went into the valley, he said.

The shaking caused from these waves is the largest killer during an earthquake, he said. "The shaking will usually last 20 seconds and after those 20 seconds things as we know them would not exist."

Former FCC commissioner against regulation

By JAMES D. CRAWLEY
Universe Staff Writer

Media content regulation is not the responsibility of the government, said Patricia Diaz Dennis, former commissioner of the Federal Communications Commission, addressing the Communications Department Symposium on Thursday.

Dennis strongly opposes content regulation but feels that government should have a role in regulating broadcasting and cable television.

Addressing the Fairness Doctrine, Dennis called it a "bad law."

She replaced the FCC where it doesn't look over the shoulders of broadcasters and news directors," she said.

While Dennis was with the FCC, her efforts focused on defending three types of structural regulations.

The first type of structural regulation Dennis defended were the rules designed to limit the concentration of control of broadcasting. Maintaining these rules would promote the public interest in having a maximum diversity of voices, she said.

Another type which concerned Dennis was the FCC's minority ownership policies. The policies are under siege at the Commission and in the courts. It comes at a time when minorities own less than three percent of all broadcast stations, Dennis said.

Government needs to continue to promote additional minority ownership, when minority voices are heard, all will benefit because the dialogue will be richer and more varied, she said. Dennis also feels that Equal Employment Opportunity is the third important type of structural regulation which would help to bring more viewpoints into the media.

"Having women, blacks, Hispanics, and other minorities in the newsroom and in the boardroom brings new perspectives to decisions that shape what the public sees and hears every night," she said.

In 1983, before being appointed to the FCC by former President Reagan, Dennis was named to the National Labor Relations Board, where she served from May 1983 to June 1986. Dennis served as FCC commissioner from 1986 to September 1989.

Dennis received a bachelor's degree from the University of California at Los Angeles and a law degree from Loyola University of Los Angeles, Calif. in 1973.

Osmond to present concert

By DAVID CHRISTENSEN
Universe Staff Writer

Few artists have left the public eye only to return bigger than ever many years later. Such is the case with Donny Osmond, who will present a concert in Salt Lake's Symphony Hall on December 13.

More than a decade after his last Top 10 hit, Osmond's "Soldier of Love," the title track from his new release, was listed at the top of "Billboard" magazine's singles chart.

"Sacred Emotion" and "Hold On," the follow-up singles, have also been climbing the charts and have recently broken into the Top 5, according to "Billboard."

Ron Clark, coordinator of BYU Hosting Services was the Osmonds' manager from 1972 to 1984. "Donny's a survivor; he doesn't know the word 'can't,'" Clark said.

Clark met Osmond at the height of his teen career.

"We'd fly him on to the stage from the back of the audience," said Clark. "Promoters actually had medics on hand for girls who passed out."

At 17, Osmond and his sister Marie became the youngest hosts of a weekly, one-hour comedy/variety series, "The Donny and Marie Show," which aired on network television for four seasons, 1976 to 1979.

Following Osmond's television series and a few film attempts, Osmond disappeared from the public eye.

"I think Donny had a harder time making the transition from teen star to adult star than, for example Michael Jackson, because he was so incredibly popular as a teen idol. People wouldn't let him grow up," Clark said.

Osmond owns a television and film studio in California and remained active in music, even though he wasn't in the public eye.

In 1988, Osmond produced several tracks, including "Soldier of Love," for Virgin Records in England.

Donny Osmond, who has been out of the spotlight for more than 10 years, will present a concert in Salt Lake Dec. 13.

Earlier this year, a New York City radio station began playing the song without revealing who the artist was. It immediately became one of the station's most requested songs.

The song followed similar patterns across the states and soon became number one on the charts.

Some of Osmond's critics have been outspoken about the artist's supposed double image.

"Nonsense," said Clark. "Donny is totally professional; he's an honorable man."

"Donny is finally starting to see the dues coming around that he's been paying over the past few years," Clark said.

BYU Horn Club to perform

By LAUREL NELSON
Universe Staff Writer

The BYU Horn Club will combine in a series of duos, trios and quartets for a concert tomorrow night at 7:30 in the Madsen Recital Hall, HFAC.

Ellen Powley, co-instructor of the Horn Club and horn teacher at BYU, said the club will perform works by J.S. Bach, Mozart, Handel and other composers.

Dana Roberts, a 19-year-old sophomore majoring in statistics from Villa Rica, Ga., said the pieces show the audience how hard it really is to play the horn.

Roberts said the program will include a quartet playing a jazz piece for the horn, which is unusual because not many composers write jazz songs for this instrument.

The program will be performed mostly by duos, trios and other small groups.

There will be, however, a few pieces performed with eight to 10 horns, Roberts said.

"Playing with a lot of horns is fun because it is hard to find that many horn players," she said.

"The concert gives us a chance to come out from the back of an orchestra. It lets people really hear what it sounds like because it is hard to pick the horn out of a group. Anyone who knows what the horn sounds like, really enjoys it," Roberts said.

Powley said the Horn Club will also perform Sunday at 2 p.m. at the Springville Art Museum, 126 E. 900 S., Springville.

The acoustics in the galleries produce a wonderful sound, Powley said. "The sound rings throughout the galleries. It is like the horns are all around," she said.

The Horn Club performed last year at the museum and is coming back by request, Powley said.

Membership in the club is open. All of the members are horn students or are involved in an orchestra on campus. To get into the club, interested members just have to show up at the master class, which is held once a week, Roberts said.

The club gives people a chance to play the horn when they do not have enough time or opportunities to play in an orchestra, she said.

"Anyone can be in it. It is just for pure enjoyment. There is no grade."

BYU to present variety concert

By LAUREL NELSON
Universe Staff Writer

Musical specialist and BYU student, Steve James will present his Christmas concert "The Best Time of The Year" tonight at 8:30 in the Grand Ballroom, ELWC.

James plans to sing all the songs from his new Christmas album, "The Best Time of The Year." He will also spotlight different traditional songs.

During the concert, James will do everything from a jingle bell boogie, to a duet with himself and an imitation of the Chipmunks. He will also involve the audience through a Christmas comedy routine done at the piano, he said.

"What people like most about the concert, besides the variety and style, is the versatility of all the different vocal styles and ranges," James said.

The concert will also feature Jasmine, three female vocalists, that sing back-up to James and are vocalists on their own. They sing a close three part harmony, he said.

"They are like an updated version of the Andrews sisters," he said.

James said the Kerner Canyon Dancers will also be guests of the concert. Many people think of them as cloggers, but in this concert they will not clog. In the "Holiday Hop" a number from James' album, the dancers will do flips and other up-beat dance steps.

James said his goal is to have the audience leave the concert with a good feeling.

"I hope everyone has fun. I want people to walk out with a better feeling that when they came," he said.

It does not matter to James where he performs because he changes his concert to fit the audience and atmosphere. He has a general concert planned for BYU, but if he finds the audience needs something else, he will adapt to them, he said.

BYU is a part of James' college concert tour. He has performed at Utah State, Dixie College and Snow College, he said. He enjoys performing at BYU because he feels at home as a student and a performer.

"I feel at home because I have been at BYU for years. I feel comfortable in the surroundings. I feel honored to be a part of the Y's Christmas," he said.

James said he started at BYU as a freshman. He goes to school part time and works on his career the rest of the time. He is now a junior pursuing his interest in communications.

James started his career at age 14 when he began singing in Los Angeles with local groups. He has performed at many conventions and fairs.

that will go to needy families.

"I encourage everyone to bring a canned food item. It is a better deal for both sides," he said.

Opera Co. to perform 'Amahl'

By VICKI L. BIRD
Universe Staff Writer

The Utah Opera Company will present a new Christmas program of "Amahl & The Night Visitors" with a one-act "Hansel & Gretel" tonight and tomorrow night.

Gian Carlo Menotti's "Amahl & The Night Visitors," composed in 1951, has become a regular Christmas feature in the United States. Its repeated holiday telecasts may well mean that more people have viewed it than any other opera ever written, and yet it continues to be a sought-after and well-attended program.

Amahl is the story of a crippled boy and his mother who shelter the three Eastern Kings on Christmas Eve while they are on their journey to visit the new-born Christ Child, and of the many miracles that occur during their stay.

"Hansel & Gretel" was first performed in Germany on December 23, 1893 with Richard Strauss conducting. The opera was an instant success. It was produced in over 50 theaters within the first year, and a touring company was formed.

The story of the opera follows the traditional fairy tale: two children are sent to the forest to pick berries and find a witch's house made of candy and gingerbread. The witch captures the children. The children then trick the witch and shove her into the oven. All the other lost children who have been under the witch's spell are then freed.

The casts of both operas consist of members of the Utah Opera Company and other local singers.

After each performance a "Gingerbread Party" will be held on the stage so that patrons and their children can talk to the performers in costume, get their autographs and have a picture taken with the performer of their choice.

The programs start at 7 p.m. in the Capitol Theatre. There is also a 2 p.m. performance on Saturday.

Flag football director, coach and trainer

Atoa keeps busy with athletic duties

By TODD L. IRWIN
Universe Sports Writer

Some students have known him as an athletic trainer and a volleyball player. Others now know him as an assistant coach for the men's volleyball team or as their P.E. instructor. Still, some have only heard his voice announcing women's volleyball and basketball games. Then many probably have no idea who he is, but appreciate his services — he was in charge of men's flag football this year.

Sam Atoa is a busy man — he's also working on his master's thesis in exercise science.

Since first attending BYU the fall of 1984, Atoa has kept a busy schedule.

Now that the flag football season is over, Atoa is able to breathe a little easier. Although his intramural job is only supposed to be 20 hours per week, Atoa said a virus crept into the computer program that has been used to set up schedules and make field assignments, forcing him and other staff members to do everything by hand this year.

Atoa estimated he ended up spending 35 hours each week just with his flag football responsibilities. "I didn't mind it because I enjoy doing this for the players," Atoa said. "I'm the type of person that when I start on something I have to finish it."

Atoa has been involved with intramurals since his first semester at BYU when he played and refereed flag football. "I've appreciated him (Atoa) ever since he came here," Lee Gibbons, director of intramural sports, said.

In addition to intramurals, Atoa played volleyball at BYU from 1984 to 1988. As an extramural sport, BYU volleyball players were not on athletic scholarship, the team did not compete in NCAA tournaments and a shoe-string budget restricted how and where the team travelled.

According to Atoa, all that didn't matter all that much. "We always hoped to go NCAA," he said, "and we just figured the best thing to do was to get better and better."

And the team did just that. In 1986, 1987 and 1988, BYU won the Collegiate Club Championships. In 1987 it beat powerhouses such as Pepperdine, USC and UCLA, some of the best teams in the country that year. In 1987, Atoa was named to the Collegiate Club All-Tournament Team, an honor similar in prestige to being named an NCAA All-American.

After all the success, BYU's men's volleyball team will begin competition as a NCAA sanctioned sport this year.

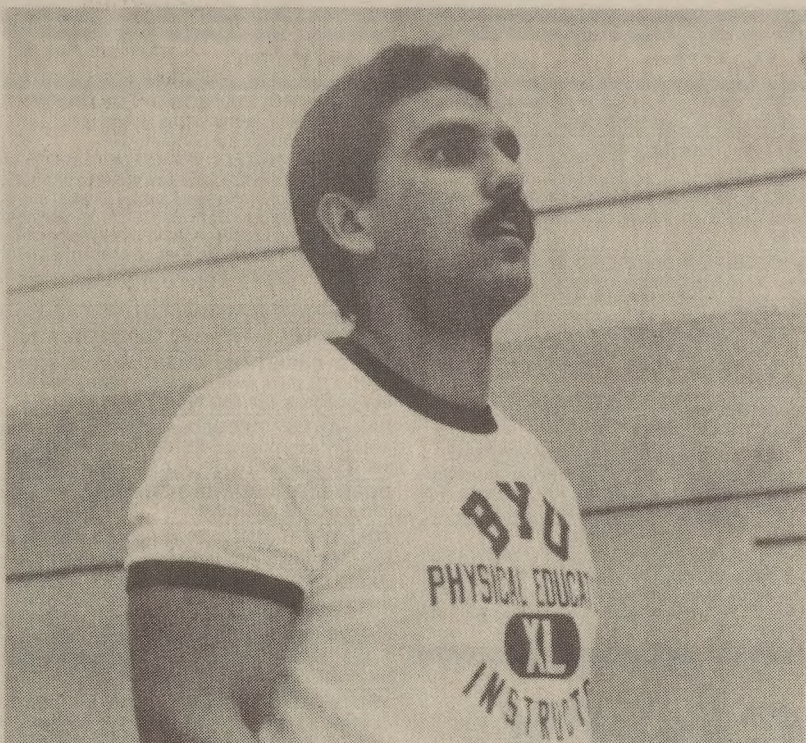

Atoa continues to be involved with BYU volleyball, now as a volunteer assistant coach. He lifts weights with the team at 7:30 a.m. three times each week and helps at the team's daily, three-hour practice sessions. Although he doesn't receive any financial compensation for his efforts, Atoa said the opportunity to be involved is worth all the time.

"I do it because I love it," he said. "I'm able to work with Carl McGown, who is considered to be one of the world's best technical coaches." After a contemplative pause Atoa added, "I just wanted to give back what the school has given me."

Atoa contributes his success to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and to his parents. A native of Western Samoa, Atoa said most of the youth-oriented activities in Samoa were sponsored by the Church, including volleyball.

After high school Atoa went to BYU-Hawaii and earned a spot on the volleyball team. Coach Dennis Largey, now a religion professor here at BYU, said Atoa has always had great athletic ability. "When they came from Samoa, they could always jump real high and they liked to hit the ball hard," he said. "Sam was a hard worker and always had great desire."

Largey said after learning some of the more technical aspects of volleyball at BYU-Hawaii and BYU, Atoa could play with anyone in the nation. On the personal side, "he (Atoa) always had a big, bright smile and a

Graduate Assistant volleyball coach Sam Atoa instructs the newly sanctioned men's Cougar volleyball team. Atoa hopes the team can be as successful as they were as an extramural club.

great attitude," he said. "He is very, very much a gentleman."

After two years at BYU-Hawaii and a couple more serving an LDS mission, Atoa came to BYU in Provo.

At BYU, Atoa received his undergraduate degree in sports medicine. Part of his training included being a trainer for various sports, including football, baseball, men's track and extramural sports.

Through all the activities, Atoa said his family has been very supportive. "I owe everything to my parents," he said. After every volleyball game he would copy the game video and send it to his parents. "If I had one wish, I would have wished that my folks could have seen me play," Atoa said. Atoa's father was able to see BYU compete once in California, but Atoa was sick with the flu and didn't play.

Whether talking about the jobs he has had, playing volleyball or going to school, Atoa said he has been lucky. "I say 'lucky,' but I've been blessed. I have good memories, real good memories (of BYU)," he said.

As for the future, Atoa says he plans to finish his master's thesis by December 1990 and spend more time with his wife, Lori. Atoa said that deep inside he wants to continue to do something with volleyball. When his wife graduates, both will have earned minors in gerontology. "I'd like to do fitness consulting with older people," he said. "That's something we can do together." He said if he could find a place like Utah, with friendly people and the mountains, he'd like to live there. He also said he would like to get back to Western Samoa.

Jazz defeat Mavericks; Malone scores 31 points

By DALLIN L. READ
Universe Sports Writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Solid defense and patience helped the Jazz to victory over the Dallas Mavericks 107-97 Thursday night at the Salt Palace.

Jazz forward Karl Malone said, "One thing I really noticed tonight was that we played solid defense and we were patient." The Jazz confused the Mavericks continually by mixing up their defense, doing something that Jerry Sloan, Jazz head coach, called "scramble ball."

Sloan said, "We ran our scramble defense and it worked out pretty well." Dallas Maverick Head Coach Richie Adubato said, "They hurt us on the press. I give them credit for mixing up their defense."

Although the team played well over all, the Jazz were flat early allowing the Mavericks to control the tempo for the first 10 minutes of play. Stand-out plays by Malone and quality shooting by Jazz guard Delaney Rudd helped turn the tempo for the Jazz.

Rudd, in his rookie year, scored nine points in the first half helping to set the pace of the game. Rudd said, "I'm playing behind one of the best guards in the NBA (John Stockton — 22 points; 13 assists), and he gets the job done. However I can help out is a plus."

Jazz center Mark Eaton said, "Dallas is a fast breaking team. When they run you need to be careful that you remain patient and do the things you have planned. I think we did that tonight."

Leading by two, 23-21, at the end of the first quarter, the Jazz slowly managed to take control of the game, which, according to Adubato, became the Mavericks downfall. He said, "When you get behind (Utah), it's hard to catch them. It's very, very tough to catch them."

Midway through the second period the Jazz slipped, but regained the lead 34-33, and never surrendered it. Only once thereafter was the lead challenged; one and one half minutes into the third period. Edwards three point play pulled the Jazz away from the Mavericks for good.

Malone led the Jazz with 31 points and 11 rebounds. Edwards, Rudd and guard Bobby Hansen each scored 12 points for the Jazz. Guard Derek Harper scored 24 points to lead the Mavericks.
